

Charles D. Vollmer, “Chuck”

Mr. Vollmer is the author and founder of Jobenomics (www.Jobenomics.com). Jobenomics, the book, deals with the economics of business, job, wealth, and tax revenue creation. Jobenomics, the national grassroots movement, has a goal of creating 20 million new US private sector jobs. Jobenomics has a following of several million people. Jobenomics programs involve highly scalable business creation efforts that can mass produce new small US businesses with emphasis on Generation Y-, Women-, Veteran-, and Minority-owned businesses. Mr. Vollmer is the CEO of eCyclingUSA (www.eCyclingUSA.com), created by Jobenomics as part of their Urban Mining and Business Generator Initiatives to reclaim high-value materials from electronic waste in order to finance new inner-city and minority-owned businesses.

Mr. Vollmer is on numerous boards including the Combat Soldier’s Recovery Fund that provides financial aid to wounded veterans, the International Center for Religion and Diplomacy that is dedicated to international peace-making and conflict resolution, several national business networks, and several small businesses. He is a frequent lecturer on national security, the economy and business creation.

In 1996 to present, Mr. Vollmer founded VII Inc. (www.VIIinc.com), a strategic planning, systems engineering and investment capital firm specializing in government and business initiatives. VII’s clients include major domestic and international government agencies and corporations. Mr. Vollmer regularly works with US Congress, Department of Defense (DoD) and government officials. He assisted leaders on force transformation authoring the US Air Force’s VECTORS campaign, the National Guard’s VANGUARD campaign, and DoD’s Rapid Dominance and Shock & Awe concepts. He also helps innovators and entrepreneurs establish small businesses. VII Inc. focuses on security (national, homeland, cyber and economic), information technology, energy, and international business. VII Capital Partners specializes in business planning and financing emerging businesses. VII Enterprise Solutions specializes in emerging information and communications technology.

From 1999 to 2007, Mr. Vollmer was under contract to the US government to assist moderate Arab leaders to develop strategies and operational concepts for coalition building. In this capacity, he developed several hundred US/Arab strategy and policy documents and led twelve symposia in the Middle East attended by officials in the Arab Gulf, Europe and the US. He frequently lectures on the MidEast, Islam and Arabs on the subject of cultural and religious engagement.

From 1991 to 1996, Mr. Vollmer was a Partner at Booz Allen & Hamilton. He organized and managed one of the largest US consortiums involved with industry privatization in the former Soviet Union. These consortiums accomplished the largest privatization effort in history converting over 70% of state-owned industries to private enterprises. He was a co-founder of the Community Learning and Information Network a distance-learning corporation that has installed several hundred sites across America. He was instrumental in establishing the National Automotive Center in Warren, Michigan.

From 1985 to 1991, he founded and was the Vice President/General Manager for General Dynamics’ new business and high-technology organization, called the Defense Initiatives Organization (DIO). In this capacity, he founded a dozen new organizations including a Nuclear Biological Chemical Reconnaissance System that was used extensively in Operation Desert Storm, a Strategic Defense Initiative (Star Wars) Division, and a Diamond Film Development Company involved in growing synthetic diamond substrate material for electronic systems. Within three years, the DIO captured over a quarter of a billion dollars of contract awards. Prior to this, he was Director of Strategic Planning and Operations Analysis when General Dynamics was a Fortune 50 company and the world’s second largest aerospace corporation.

From 1979 to 1985, he was a senior engineer at McDonnell Douglas and was on the initial design teams of F-15E and Stealth aircraft. As marketing director, he was largely responsible for the $32 billion sale of the F-15E to the USAF.

Mr. Vollmer served 10 years active duty in the USAF and 13 years with the Air National Guard. He accumulated over 3,000 hours in various fighter aircraft, flew 175 combat missions in Southeast Asia, and received six (6) Distinguished Flying Crosses and eleven (11) Air Medals. Mr. Vollmer received a B.S. degree in Engineering Management from the USAF Academy, a Masters Degree in Education from Northern Arizona University, and attended Massachusetts Institute of Technology’s Sloan School for Senior Executives. He is married to his high school sweetheart, Trish Eagan, from Lewisburg, Pennsylvania. Their son is the President of VII Enterprise Solutions.
